   It is said that there is a lake under the Paris Opera. Also, there are hundreds of rooms, long passages, seventeen floors (five of which are underground), 2,500 doors and many trap doors. This kind of building gives a writer many opportunities for mystery, strange sounds, and characters coming and going in unusual ways.

   b  La Sorelli
   c  the Opera ghost
   d  Joseph Buquet
   e  Madame Giry/Meg's mother
   f  Monsieur/M. Moncharmin
   g  Christine Daaé
   h  Philippe George Marie/Count of Chagny

   j  Monsieur/M. Firmin Richard k  Mr. Daaé/Christine's father l  Monsieur/M. Valérius
   m  the Angel of music
5  a  The young ballet dancers rush into La Sorelli's dressing room because they think they have seen the Opera ghost. This is important to the story because the reader is given a description of the ghost and his habits.
   b  The dead body of Joseph Buquet is found hanging in the third cellar under the stage. This scares everyone; they think the Opera ghost is responsible.
   c  After fainting at the end of her performance, Christine is with a doctor in her dressing room. Raoul tries to see her but has to wait outside the room. When Christine is alone in her dressing room, Raoul hears her talking to a man. He searches the room after she leaves, but he finds no one. This makes Raoul jealous and upset, and it makes the reader believe in the existence of a phantom.
   d  At the wonderful party for the retiring managers, everyone sees a man with a strange face and hollow eyes sitting at the end of the table. Everyone believes that this person, who does not speak or eat or drink, is the Opera ghost. This gives the reader more proof that the ghost is real, but nothing is definite.
6  a  In this passage, the Opera ghost demands 20,000 francs per month. Monsieur Moncharmin and Monsieur Richard laugh at this and treat it as a joke.
   b  They laugh at this letter, too. They think that the old managers are playing a trick on them and want to keep Box Five for themselves. They send tickets for Box Five to Monsieur Debienne and Monsieur Poligny but intend to do this only once.
   c  They are annoyed by the letter from the two retired managers because they think the joke is going on too long.
   d  They are annoyed, amused, and then angry with Madame Giry's explanations. They think she is mad and they fire her from her job. After this they inspect Box Five for themselves.

8  From the girls in the ballet company and Joseph Buquet, we learn that O.G. (Opera ghost) is ugly, wears fine clothes, walks quietly and slowly, is silent, has the face of Death and a body like a skeleton, is very thin, has eyes that are just two big, black holes, and no nose. At the party for the retiring managers, we learn that O.G. is ugly, pale, with two deep black holes for eyes. He doesn't eat or drink, but this time he has some kind of nose, possibly a false one. Madame Giry says that O.G. has a lovely man's voice.

e  The inspector reports that there were people in Box Five making a lot of noise and annoying others. They were laughing loudly, were not in their right mind, and made stupid remarks to the inspector. This shows that the Opera ghost will make trouble if anyone uses Box Five.

f  Christine was with her father in Perros-Guirec. At the beach Christine's beautiful singing captured Raoul's imagination. When the girl's scarf was blown out to sea, Raoul rescued it. Christine laughed and kissed the boy. This was when their love began.

g  Raoul follows Christine into the graveyard beside the church at Perros-Guirec late at night. He sees her praying at her father's grave and he hears the most perfect music, a piece that Christine's father used to play when he was alive. When Christine leaves, skulls roll toward Raoul and he sees the shadow of a man. Raoul follows the man and sees the face of Death with a pair of burnt-out eyes. He feels that he has seen the devil and he faints. This is more proof that ghosts and phantoms are real in this story.

13  Opera ghost, Angel of Music, Erik

14  a  A box of candy, a pair of opera glasses, strangely cold air; the sound of breathing, his laughter, and his voice.
    b  Raoul recognizes his face as the face of Death from Perros-Guirec when he is wearing a mask and dressed as the Red Death.
    c  Raoul sees the ghost’s foot and his coat and then looks into his eyes; Christine’s voice changes.
    d  Raoul and Christine hear a faint singing coming from the walls; the voice is male and beautiful; an icy wind sweeps over Raoul’s face.
    e  A voice whispers in Raoul’s ear about Christine, her ring, and her soul.
    f  A hand closes a trap door suddenly.
    g  A shadow follows Raoul and Christine; they hear the sound of someone in pain; a shadow approaches them; the shadow listens while Christine tells Raoul her story; a voice says, “Horror! Horror! Horror!”; the Phantom’s burning eyes stare down when Christine and Raoul kiss.
    h  Christine hears the Phantom’s voice; the room changes and she is mysteriously outside the room; a stone-cold hand seizes her wrist and covers her mouth when she tries to scream.
    i  Christine recognizes the Phantom’s voice; he tells her his name; she sees the face beneath the mask; she hears him play his music.

    d  This allows Erik to steal Christine from the stage.
    e  The disappearing money, replaced by false notes, confuses the managers and makes them believe in Opera ghost.
    f  The mirror is a door in the wall. It has been cleverly made to allow Erik to enter his hidden world.

23  Erik has Christine in the opera house or in the house on the lake. Erik made the system that allows Christine's mirror to work as an entrance to his secret world. Erik is known in Persia as “the trap door lover.” Erik built the walls, the doors, and the trap doors of the Opera. Erik's secret world can be reached through the cellars of the opera house. Erik is very skilful with a Punjab rope. Erik has a torture room.

The author’s method of telling the story gives us (the readers) the impression that we are working with the story-teller to find out what is really happening. We learn bits of information from different times and places, and slowly we have to put it all together. This is an exciting way to tell a story because we feel that we are solving the mystery.
